Legislators backed to address causes of climate change at London summit

Next week London hosts the first GLOBE Climate Legislation Summit, a gathering of leading lawmakers from around the world whose focus is global warming.

While progress remains slow at the UN talks, many are hopeful that action at domestic level could be more productive and politically easier to accomplish.

In this video Lord Deben, GLOBE President and chairman of the UK’s Climate Change Committee explains what this summit hopes to achieve and outlines the findings from the 2013 GLOBE Legislation Study.
